All For A Dime A

I had seen All for a Dime! at BEA, and I finally got around to reserving it from the library. In this story, Bear, Mole, and Skunk bring their favorite things - blueberries, worms, and perfume - to Market Day to sell. Bear makes a bunch of money, but the other two spend the same dime over and over again buying their own items. It's cute.

Something about ALL FOR A DIME!

Beginning with the first issue the Hugo-winning Xero (1960-1963), comics played a central role with the regular column "All in Color for a Dime," featuring an extraordinary cast of rotating writers. Lupoff (who co-edited Xero) and Thompson selected eleven pieces for inclusion in All in Color for a Dime.

All in Color for a Dime by Richard A. Lupoff

"All in Color for a Dime" has a secret that modern comic collectors may have lost. It exudes joy for the four-color wonders know as comics. There is so much excitement in recounting the lost but not forgotten Captain Marvel, or even gaining new found respect for Popeye. All those little treasures are recounted in personal stories.

All in Color for a Dime: Lupoff, Richard A., Thompson, Don ...

The first time a dime was minted in a United States Mint building was in 1796. The name of the coin sounded the same as it does today, but the spelling was "disme" because the word is based on the Latin word "decimus," meaning "one tenth." The French used the word "disme" when they came up with the idea of money divided into ten ...
