I inherited the door chime shown in the attached photo from the previous owner of our house. It could be well over 30 years old, but still works perfectly and has the advantage of being louder than a modern electronic chime. It is marked Friedland No. 454 inside the outer cover (it's different from the more recent D454 Warbler).

Most houses have more than one entryway—front door, back door, garage—so just choose the entryway which needs a doorbell the most. There are wireless kits on sale that have a number of transmitters, while some kits only have a single transmitter. Thus, you might require extra units with you if you need to equip more than one door.
